

Teresa Ashe

Position on governors: Foundation Governor

Date of appointment: 2016

Sub Committee: Vision and Values

Business/Community/Work interests:

Academic

Overview:

Teresa Ashe is an academic tutor, teaching politics and economics at the Open University. She is also an academic researcher working on discourses of climate change in science, politics and the media at Oxford University. She has experience of voluntary work in Primary schools and of working with vulnerable people in the community.

She has been a Foundation governor for over six months, but her son has just started in Reception class this year, so she also brings a parent perspective to the role. She is subject governor for Science and takes a particular interest in the school's before and after school care (The Den). She is also going to be running the knitting club on a Thursday lunchtime from November and can't wait!
